I Love to Think of Thee.

I love to think of thee,
For in my very soul is full of blissful bliss.
Yes, at the calm and holy evening,
When, one by one, the happy angels
Light up the dancing lamps of heaven,
And roll back the mystic veil of blue,
While Luna bows a welcome over the hills,
And clothes old earth with silvery garb—
When the very breeze comes softly laden
With odors from the mountain flowers—
When no sounds save the hollow winds
Or the hummings of the shrill clarion
Jerk on the mountain solitude;
Oh! then I love to think of thee.

To think of thee?
As, it were a very part of heaven.
Thy dear and blessed name is stamped
On each sweet flower and trembling leaf
That hangs about my laborious
Each happy bird that wakes its music
In the matted folds of yonder vine,
Sings thy dear name to me.
Each drop of dew that settles on the flowers,
In all its purity tells of thee.
Thou fanning clouds, which that rare
The rainbow's gaily prancing
Yes, the crimson bow itself doth bear
A sparkling thought of thee.

And this is why
They seem so pure—thy soul is pure,
And in the mill heaven of thy heart
I read thy heart's devotion.
Thou art here with me this very night—
Thy gentle hand is clasped in mine,
And thy dear eye upturns so lovingly—
Thou dost hope to my wild, beating heart,
Whisper to my wildly beating heart,
And I indeed am more than bliss.

With thee,
Dear, gentle spirit I could live,
Aye, though this life were a very desert,
When no unspringing streamlet glides,
No sunshine on the flowery hills,
No wild bird music in the groves,
No light save that which ever burns
Far down thy gentle lustrous eyes
To me and light my happy way.

For thee well—
The sun runs down behind the west
And backward flings the twilight soft
And on my wine to thee I send
My last, my long—adieu!

Mr. Editor:

Having seen in your paper the proceedings of what is termed the "ugly club," which has attracted the notice of the public, it becomes necessary to inform the public where that club has its existence, and its organization; the honorable Secretary, who imagines himself a man of great capacity as a writer and a politician, has organized in his imagination the club of which he styles himself the secretary, for the purpose of pouring forth his long pent up malice against others, and aims to pass it off as wit, of which the public can judge.

Shortly after the gentleman (as for the present I shall use that term) after the game was run down by others, obtained a seat in the Senate, he was riding along where he was not known; he met a man who bore his horse to the other side of the road, and seemed anxious to avoid him, which was observed by the gentleman, "Why sir, you seem to wish to avoid me, I am the Senator from—"

"Ask your pardon, sir, I thought you was a robber, and if you are not he so kind as to take in your countenance, as I was shunning you on that account."

Ever since that event the gentleman has been endeavoring to get up an association for his own safety and protection; and has formed in his own cranium the club called the "ugly club."

Whether these gentlemen, whose names he has used as members in connection with his own ascent to the association he best knows. The same gentleman tried his hand at poetry, in a publication that appeared which the gentleman held an honorable position, and if its objects had been outside of his own household it might have done well enough. The publication caused a good deal of mirth; some said he was crazy; others said he never had any sense, whilst the more thinking said he had been a country school-master, and therefore was inexcusable to all except the lady to whom it was dedicated. What the gentleman can think of himself can be best imagined by the way he writes, or attempts to write, and if it is his hope to write himself to Congress, and get there by the aid of the club of his imagination, I think he will be mistaken, and find himself on board of the ill-fated vessel that he imagined bore the Hon. Jas. W. Stone to Liberia; and he himself will be colonized on the desert of public opinion, notwithstanding all his efforts to escape.

I would advise him instead of pointing out the defects in others, to betake himself to a more humane course, as he would have the public believe he is a humane man; or of the human species. As I am informed a member of the church that he

SOMETHING FOR A COLD.

"Henry," said Mr. Green to his little son Henry, a lad in his eighth year, "I want you to go to the store for me."

Mr. Green was a working-man, who lived in a comfortable cottage, which he had built from money earned by honest industry. He was, moreover, a sober, kind-hearted man, well liked by all his neighbors, and beloved by his own family.

"I'm ready, father," said Henry, who left his play, and went to look for his cap, the moment he was asked to go on an errand.

"Look in the cupboard, and get me the pint flask. It's on the lower shelf," Henry did as desired, and then asked—"What shall I get, father?"

"Tell Mr. Brady to send me a pint of good Irish whiskey."

The boy tipped lightly away singing as he went. He was always pleased to do any errand for his father.

"This cold of mine gets worse," remarked Mr. Green to his wife, as Henry left the house. "I believe I'll try old Mr. Van Dusen's remedy—a bowl of hot whiskey-punch. He says it always cures him; it throws him into a fever perspiration, and the next morning he feels as clear as a bell."

"It is not always good," remarked Mrs. Green, "to have the pores open. We are more liable to take cold."

"Very true. It is necessary to be careful how we expose ourselves afterwards."

"I think I could make you some herb-tea, that would do as much good as the whiskey-punch," said Mrs. Green.

"Perhaps you could," returned her husband, "but I don't like your bitter stuff. It never was to my fancy."

Mrs. Green smiled, and said no more. A few moments afterwards, the door opened, and Henry came in, looking pale and frightened.

"Oh, father!" he cried, panting, Mr. Brooks is killing Margaret!"

"What?" Mr. Green started to his feet. "Oh!" exclaimed the child, "he's killing her! he's killing her! I saw him strike her on the head with his fist." And tears rolled over the boy's cheeks.

Knowing Brooks to be a violent man when intoxicated, Mr. Green lost not a moment in hesitation or reflection, but left his house hurriedly, and ran to the dwelling of his neighbor, which was near at hand. On entering the house a sad scene presented itself. The oldest daughter of Brooks, a girl in her seventeenth year, was lying upon a bed, insensible, while a large bruised and bloody spot on the side of her face showed where the iron fist of her brutal father had done its fearful if not fatal work. Her mother bent over her, weeping; while two little girls were shrinking with frightened looks in a corner of the room.

Mr. Green looked around for the wretched man, who, in the insanity of drunkenness, had done this dreadful deed but he was not to be seen.

"Where is Mr. Brooks?" he asked. "He is gone for the doctor," was replied.

And in a few minutes he came in with a physician. He was partially sobered, and his countenance had a troubled expression. His eyes shrank beneath the steady, rebuking gaze of his neighbors.

"Did you say your daughter had fallen down stairs?" said the doctor, as he leaned over Margaret, and examined the dreadful bruise on her cheek.

"Yes—yes," stammered the guilty father, adding this falsehood to the evil act.

"Had the injury been a few inches farther up, she would ere this breathe her last," said the doctor—looking steadily at Brooks, until the eyes of the latter sunk to the floor.

Just then there were sighs of returning life in the poor girl, and the doctor turned towards her all his attention. In a little while she began to moan, and move her arms about, and soon opened her eyes.

After she was fully restored to consciousness, Mr. Green returned to his home where he was met with eager questions from his wife. After describing all he had seen, he made this remark—

"There are few better men than Thomas Brooks when he is sober; but when he is drunk he acts like a demon."

"He must be a demon to strike with his hand fist, a delicate creature like his daughter Margaret. And she is so good a girl. Ah, me! to what dreadful consequences does this drinking lead!"

"It takes away a man's reason," said Mr. Green, "and when this is gone, he becomes the passive subject of evil influences. He is, in fact, no longer a man."

Mrs. Green sighed deeply.

"His poor wife!" she murmured; "how my heart aches for her, and his poor children! If the husband and father changes, from a guardian and provider for his family, into their brutal assailant, to whom can they look for protection? Oh, it is sad!"

"It is dreadful! dreadful!" said Mr. Green. "It is only a few years ago," he added, "since Brooks began to show that he was drinking too freely. He always liked his glass, but he knew how to control himself, and never drowned his reason in his cups. Of late, however, he seems to have lost all control over himself. I never saw a man so abandoned in himself so suddenly."

"All effects of this kind can be traced back to very small beginnings," remarked Mrs. Green.

"Yes. A man does not become a drunkard in a day. The habit is one of very gradual formation."

"But when once formed," said Mrs. Green, "hardly any power seems strong enough to break it. It clings to a man as if it were part of himself."

"And we might almost say that it was a part of himself," replied Mr. Green; "for whatever we do from a contracted habit, fixes in the mind an inclination thereto, that carries us away as a vessel is borne upon the current of a river."

"How careful, then, should every one be, not to put himself in the way of forming so dangerous a habit. Well do I remember when Mr. Brooks was married. A more promising young man could not be found—nor one with a kinder heart. The last evil I feared for him and his gentle wife was that of drunkenness. Alas! that this calamity should have fallen upon their household.—What evil, short of crime, is greater than this?"

"It is so hopeless," remarked Mr. Green. "I have talked with Brooks a good many times, but it has done no good. He promises amendment, but does not keep his promise a day."

"Touch not, taste not, handle not. This is the only safe rule," said Mrs. Green.

"Yes, I believe it," returned her husband. "The man who never drinks is in no danger of becoming a drunkard."

For some time, Mr. and Mrs. Green continued to converse about the sad incident which had just transpired in the family of their neighbor, while their little son upon whose mind the fearful sight he had witnessed, was still painfully vivid, sat and listened to all they were saying, with a clear comprehension of the meaning of the whole.

After awhile the subject was dropped. There had been a silence for some minutes when the attention of Mr. Green was again called to certain unpleasant bodily sensations, and he said—

"I declare this cold of mine is very bad. I must do something to break it before it gets worse. Henry did you get that Irish whiskey I sent for?"

"No, sir," replied the child. "I was so frightened when I saw Mr. Brooks strike Margaret, that I ran back."

"Oh, well, I don't wonder! It was dreadful. Mr. Brooks was very wicked to do so. But take the flask and run over to the store. Tell Brady I want a pint of good Irish whiskey."

Henry turned from his father, and went to the table on which he had placed the flask. He did not move with his usual alacrity.

"It was whiskey, wasn't it?" said the child, as he took the bottle in his hand, "that made Mr. Brooks strike Margaret?"

And he looked so earnestly into his father's face, and with so strange an expression, that the man felt disturbed, while he yet wondered at the manner of the lad.

"Yes," replied Mr. Green, "it was the whiskey. Mr. Brooks, if he had been sober, would not have hurt a hair of her head."

Henry looked at the bottle, then at his father, in so strange a way, that Mr. Green, who did not at first comprehend what was in the child's thoughts, wondered still more. All was soon understood, for Henry, bursting into tears, laid down the flask, and throwing his arms around his father's neck, said—

"Oh, father! don't get any whiskey!"

Mr. Green deeply touched by the incident, hugged his boy tightly to his bosom. He said—

"I only wanted it for medicine dear. But never mind. I won't let such dangerous stuff come into my house. Mother shall make me some of her herb-tea, and that will do as well."

Henry looked up, after a while, timidly. "You're not angry with me, father?" came from his innocent lips.

"Oh, no, my child! Why should I be angry?" replied Mr. Green, kissing the cheek of his boy. Then the sunshine came back again to Henry's heart, and he was happy as before.

Mrs. Green made the herb-tea for her husband, and it proved quite as good for him as the whiskey-punch. A glass or two of cold water, on going to bed, would probably have been of more real advantage in the case, than either of these doubtful remedies.

The kind of Boys they raise on Long Island.

The celebrated H. W. Beecher spent a Sunday at Greenport, not long since, and of course preached a sermon. Returning from church, he passed a number of specimens of "Young America," amusing themselves with a game of marbles, rather intimately mixed with fancy swearing.

"My boy," said the Rev., to an interesting youth of about eight years, "My boy, I am frightened."

"Are you?" answers button, quite natively, "Why the d— I don't you run then?"

A PATCH ON BOTH KNEES.

When I was a boy, it was my fortune to breathe for a long time, what some writers term the "bracing air of poverty." My mother—light as the turf upon the form which she had inherited—sweet and gentle spirit—was what is called an ambitious woman; for that quality which overturns thrones and supplants dynasties finds a legitimate sphere in the humblest abode that the shadow of poverty ever darkened. The struggles between the wish to keep up appearances and the pinching grip of necessity, produced such shifts and contrivances, at which if told, so a woman would smile, and some, to whom they would teach their own experience, would sigh. But let me not distract the profane eyes to the mysteries of poverty.

On one occasion it was necessary to send me on an errand to a neighbor of better circumstances than ourselves, and therefore it was desirable that I should be presented in the best possible aspect. Great pains were accordingly taken to give a smart appearance to my patched and dilapidated wardrobe, and conceal the rents and chasms which the envious tooth of time had made in it; and by way of throwing over my equipment a savor and sprinkling of gentility my red and toll-dreaded hands were enclosed in the unfamiliar casing of a pair of gloves, which had belonged to my mother in days when her years were fewer and her heart was lighter.

I sallied forth on my errand, and on my way encountered a much older and bigger boy, who evidently belonged to a family which had all our own dragging poverty, and none of our upspringing wealth of spirit. His rags fairly fluttered in the breeze; his hat was constructed upon the most approved principles of ventilation; and his shoes from their valuable antiquity, might be deemed a pair of fossil shoes—the very ones in which Shem shuffled into the ark. He was an impudent varlet, which a dare devil swaggar in his gait and an "I'm as good as you" leer in his eyes; the very whelp to throw dirt at a well-dressed horseman because he was dressed, at a boy's ruffles because he was clean. As soon as he saw me his eyes detected the practical inconsistencies which characterized my costume, and taking me by the shoulder, turning me round with no gentle hand, and surveying me from head to foot, he exclaimed with a scornful laugh of derision, "A patch on both knees and gloves on!"

I still recall the sting of wounded feeling which shot through me at those words. To paralyze a celebrated line by the immortal Tuscan.

"That day I wore my gloves no more."

But the lesson, so rudely enforced sank deep into my mind; and in after life I have had frequent occasion to make a practical application to the words of my ragged friend, when I have observed the ridiculous inconsistencies which so often mark the conduct of mankind.

When, for instance, I see parents carefully providing for the education of their children, furnishing them with teachers of music, dancing and drawing, but giving no thought to that moral and religious training from which the true dignity and permanent happiness of life can come; never teaching them habits of self-sacrifice and self-discipline, and control, but rather by example, instructing them in evil speaking, in uncharitableness, in envy and in falsehood, I think with a sigh of the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see a family in cold, selfish solitude, not habitually warning their house with a glow of happy faces, but lavishing that which could furnish the hospitality of a whole year upon the profusion of a single night, I think of the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see our public men cultivating exclusively those qualities which win a way to office, and neglecting those which will qualify them to fill honorable the post to which they aspire, I recall the patch on both knees and gloves on.

When I see men sacrificing peace of mind and health of body to the insane pursuit of wealth, living in ignorance of the character of the children who are growing up around them, cutting themselves off from the highest and purest pleasures of nature, and so perverting their humanity that that which was sought as a means insensibly comes to be followed as an end, I say to myself, "A patch on both knees and gloves on."

Physicians in India raise blisters with red-hot irons and dress them with cayenne pepper. If such treatment don't make a man smart, we don't know anything that will. One of the favorable cathartics is made of pills of gunpowder—twelve to a dose—a minute after they are down, a coal of fire is administered, when a movement of the particle takes place, that either eradicates the disease or the invalid—commonly the latter.

Dodging a Dun.

Some how or how to do it, and I can see a dun at any distance, and I can tell him effectively. It is a knack acquired by long experience. If a dun, however, by his experience become expert, the dun stands a small chance of escape. The dun becomes equally sensitive in detecting the debtor, and a ten are practiced between the two maneuvers that would rule the reputation of even Napoleon I. say.

We heard a story the other day, of old Dr. G—, of Portsmouth, N. H., though not having any very great relevancy to the preceding paragraph, is nevertheless to the point as regards the dunning. For there is a wide difference between the dunner and the professional.

Dr. G— was a man of great integrity and worth, and his business habits were on the square—exact in everything that was his own, and paying every man he due. He held a note against a gentleman of Hampton for some considerable amount, and whenever he met him, the Doctor was ready, note in hand, for the payment of the instalment. It became at last an agonizing dread with the debtor, about meeting the Doctor, particularly at a time when troubled with a disease known in financial parlance as "shorts." But when ever he met him, the Doctor's dun would be anticipated by his debtor's movement for his pocket book and frequent payment were made without seeing the note at all, or inquiring as to the chances of its eventual payment. He knew that the Doctor was honest, and that it would be all right, and several payments were thus blindly made.

A great dearth of funds made him more shy of meeting the Doctor, and as he passed through the town his eyes wandered in all directions to catch a glimpse of his dread creditor, and avoid him if possible. He succeeded admirably for a while, and on-generated the old man several times; but fate does not always favor the brave, and the Doctor, from a distant position, saw his victim to his horse to a post, and enter the store. He made all the haste he could, and entered the store when his debtor dodged behind a rice sack.

"Didn't I see Mr. — come in here?" asked the Doctor.

"He did come in here, sir," said the shopkeeper, "but has gone somewhere now."

The Doctor said he was not in a hurry and could wait as well as not; he saw his horse at the door, and thought he would be back before long. The man remained hid, and the old Doctor waited a long time. At last he went out, to the man's great relief, and after awhile he himself went out, and was just stepping upon his wagon, when the Doctor, darted at him from a doorway.

"Well, Mr. —," said the Doctor, "you needn't dodge me any more; that note has been paid up this six months, and I have been trying to see you, that I might pay you back twenty dollars that you overpaid me."

The recollection of hiding behind a rice sack to avoid being paid twenty dollars, haunted the man as long as he lived, and among other advice which he gave his children was this, contained in a flourish of domestic poetry, written in chalk on the old dresser:

"Never run

When you see a dun.

[Car, et Dag.]

CONSEQUENCE OF LOVING A LOVER.—For some days past a very melancholy female has been seen wandering about the wharves of the Third District presenting a most mournful and disconsolate appearance. She wept constantly and a peculiarly spotted handkerchief which she had in her hand was constantly moistened with her tears. Poor creature! her melancholy appeared to be a rooted sorrow of the heart which admitted of no amelioration, and unfeeling would be the wretch of the gender masculine who would not extend to her the need of pity. An officer of the Third District observed the weeping maid, and fearing that she had committed a suicidal plunge into the bosom of the river, he immediately arrested her and took her before Recorder Soumain.

The worthy Recorder informed the disconsolate one that suicide was very wicked, and asked her why she wanted to drown herself. A smile came over the sad face of the maiden when she replied, that she was a female, a lover, with all the warm and endearing instincts of her sex; that the object of her affections had gone up the river, and that her only reason for visiting the wharves were, that she might look on the course taken by the steamer on which her lover departed, weep for his absence and pray, for his speedy return, but as for her drowning herself—said she with emphasis—"I don't think I'm such a damned fool as to do it."

The Recorder told the maiden that she might go.—N. O. True Ball.

If you have one good trait in your nature, though ever so small or insignificant, watch over it well, lest, like the snowflake that falls upon the bosom of the great deep, it may be dissolved and forever lost in the waves of the vast sea of iniquity.

THE POST.

Wednesday Morning, Mar. 30, 1853

Mr. J. T. O'BRYAN, is our authorized agent at Bardonia for the reception of Subscriptions, Advertisements, &c., and also authorized to receive and receipt for all monies due us in that region.

Rags! Rags! Rags!!!

Clean Linnen and Cotton Rags wanted at this office. The highest price in CASH will be paid for any amount brought.

MYSTERIOUS.—On Monday last Mrs. Cole, aged 70 years, mysteriously disappeared from Covington, Ky.

—A negro woman recently arrested in New York, has 191 indictments preferred against her for robberies.

Girard College during the past year contained 301 orphan children, of which number 246 were born in the city of Philadelphia.

Good.—The amount of gold shipped from San Francisco during January and February is $9,896,600 against $4,075,892 in the same months last year.

—On Monday last the weekly line of steamers, of the United States Mail Steamship Company, commenced running from New York. On that day the Illinois took her departure, and will be followed by the Crescent City on the 28th. The days of departure will be on the 5th, 13th, 20th, and 25th of each month.

—The Governor of Massachusetts has named the 7th of April as fast day.

—Ole Bull will pass through Louisville next month, en route for the East. He will probably give a concert there.

—A notorious character named Shelby Garret, was shot dead in Nashville on Thursday night, by a young man who peddles books.

—The American artists at Rome have opened a reading-room for their own use.

—We learn from the Gaceta de Costa Rica, that war is actually going on between the States of Honduras and Guatemala. The origin of the difficulty is alleged to be that the troops of the latter had availed the territory of the former government, and committed various outrages, last November, and there being no probability of a peaceful settlement, the Guatemalan army, under Gen. Carrera, had marched to the frontier with four cannons, and that of Honduras, 3,000 strong, under Gen. Cabanas, was ready upon the frontier.

—The new Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Guthrie, has published an official notice to the effect that proposals for the erection of a branch mint in California will be received until the first of April ensuing. The cost is limited to $300,000.

A World's Temperance Convention.—The N. Y. Tribune says it has been suggested that a World's Temperance Convention be held in that city at some time during the approaching World's Fair—say in August.

—Gov. Martin, of New Hampshire has appointed Thursday, the seventh day of April, to be observed as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer throughout that State.

—On Monday, the 14th inst., the thermometer at Albany, N. Y., was within 10 degrees of zero.

—On the 14th and 15th inst., $30,000 were subscribed at Pittsburgh to the Chertiers Valley railroad.

VALUABLE DIAMOND.—A stone recently found in California, of the size of a pigeon's egg, has been scientifically tested and is pronounced to be a diamond in the rough, of rare purity. If the report about it is true, its value is enormous.—The Crown Diamond of England, which is valued at ten millions of dollars, can bear no comparison with it.

—The Philadelphia papers announce that the immense Asden estate was divided on Monday among the thirty-five heirs, and each one received the snug little sum of $20,000.

—Chevalier Wikoff has been liberated from prison at Genoa, where he was confined on a charge of attempting to force a young and wealthy English lady to marry him. He has since made his appearance in Paris. His adventures and trials have made quite a hero of him.

"Blessed is the man who advertises, for he always gets 'value received!'"

PROSPECTUS OF THE LEBANON POST

Enough has been said and wrote upon the innumerable advantages arising out of having a newspaper in a County; I will not, therefore, enlarge upon this point. Feeling convinced that the people of Marion wish an establishment of the kind in their county, I have consented, after many solicitations, to make a trial; let us see what will be the result. I had partially made my arrangements to move upon the Ohio river, but if the people of Marion will show, by subscribing liberally for the "POST," that they want a paper, we will succumb to their wishes, and settle amongst them.

THE POST, will be strictly NEUTRAL in Politics and Religion; in all things else perfectly INDEPENDENT, expressing freely the views of the Editor and his Correspondents, on the passing events of the day, local matters, &c. I am decidedly in favor of Railroad communication in Kentucky, being firmly convinced that in that way alone, can our beloved State keep up with the advancement of the age and her older Sister-States. I am particularly in favor of a communication of this kind across the State, and thus giving us a direct intercourse with the great southern mart; being convinced that such an intercourse would redound to the benefit of all classes, and that the proposed route through Marion County is the best location in the state, and believe firmly that it can and will be run. We will advocate, conditionally, to the best of our ability, this truly beneficial enterprise and solicit the pious of others.

THE POST, will be dedicated to News, Agriculture, Tales, Poetry, Anecdotes, &c., &c. Nothing shall appear in its columns of a hurtful or demoralizing tendency to the mind; in a word, it shall be a FAMILY NEWSPAPER.

THE POST, will be issued weekly, on every Wednesday, on an imperial sheet at $2 per year in advance, $2.50 if paid in six months, or $3 if the payment is delayed until the end of the year. Wishing to commence on the last of April or the first of May, I would be gratified to receive all of my prospectuses, crowded with names before that time.

EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

Another Scientific Wonder.

GREAT CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA! DR. J. S. HOUGHTON'S PEPSIN,
THE TRUE DIGESTIVE FLUID, OR GASTRIC JUICE!

Prepared from Rennet, or the Fourth Stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. HOUGHTON, M.D., Philadelphia, Pa.
"DIGESTION." Such is the true meaning of the word PEPSIN. It is the chief element, or great Digestive Principle of the Gastric Juice; the Solvent of the Food, the Purifying, Preserving and Stimulating Agent of the Stomach and Intestines. It is extracted from the Digestive Stomach of the Ox, thus forming a true Digestive Fluid, precisely like the natural Gastric Juice in its Chemical powers, and furnishing a complete and perfect substitute for it.
This is Nature's own Remedy for an unhealthy Stomach. No other man can equal its curative powers. It contains Alcohol, Bitters, Acids, or Nauseous Drugs. It is extremely agreeable to the taste, and may be taken by the most feeble patients who cannot eat a water cracker without acute distress. Beware of cheap imitations. Pepsin is not a Drug.
Half a teaspoonful of Pepsin infused in water, will digest or dissolve five pounds of Roast Beef in about two hours, out of the stomach.
The Scientific Evidence upon which this Remedy is based is in the highest degree curious and remarkable.
Call on the Agent and get a Descriptive Circular, gratis, giving a large amount of scientific evidence, from Leibig's Animal Chemistry; Dr. Combe's Physiology of Digestion; Dr. Percival on Food and Diet; Dr. John W. Draper of New York University; Prof. Dunglison's Physiology; Dr. Silliman, of Yale College; Dr. Carpenter's Physiology, &c.; together with reports of cures from all parts of the United States.

Pepsin in Fluid and Powder.
Dr. HOUGHTON'S PEPSIN is prepared in powder and in Fluid Form—and in prescription vials for the use of Physicians. The powder will keep for years without the loss of its curative power. Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

Select Poetry.

We Fade as a Leaf.

We fade away like autumn leaves,
Before the north wind's chilling breath,
And earth, with open breast receives,
All that has felt the touch of death.
We fade away, nor leave behind
A trace of all the glorious past,
Save where the magic touch of mind
A spell upon the earth has cast.

We fade away, but like the leaf,
The purpose of our life is done,
Our works are planted like the seed,
And saved each hour we have won.
Then at the end of our career,
With newer life and newer powers,
We think no more how early here
Faded the leaf of autumn's bowers.

Miscellaneous.

Homestead Exemption.

The following extracts exhibit the various qualifications of the Homestead Exemption Bills now in the several States named:

Maine.—A lot of land, a dwelling house, and out buildings thereon, or so much thereof as shall not exceed $5,000 in value.

Vermont.—The homestead of every housekeeper, or head of a family, to the value of $5,000 and the yearly products thereof.

Georgia.—Twenty acres of land, including dwelling and improvements, not to exceed $2,000; and the additional amount of five acres for each child under fifteen years of age.

Florida.—Forty acres of land, when not in any town or city, and provided such does not exceed in value $400.

Alabama.—Forty acres of land to every farmer; and to every housekeeper residing in a town or city, a house and lot not to exceed $3,000.

South Carolina.—A homestead of fifty acres of land, including the dwelling house and appurtenances, not exceeding $500 in value, and to extend to any property within the limits of any city or town corporate.

A BEREAVED PARENT.—Achmet Jayer Pasha (of Egypt) was said to be very fond of his children—for a Pasha—and was apt to take the death of any of them much to heart. One sickly season a violent epidemic broke out in the royal nursery, and carried off some eighty-nine of the Pasha's offspring. An English missionary, who chanced to be in Alexandria at the time, called to condole with his Majesty, hoping that he might turn his benevolence to the advantage of his soul, and make a good christian of him. But the old Healden at once tabooed religious topics, and having ordered a pipe for his visitor, inveterately smoked on in silence. The missionary felt rather awkward. He could espy no opening for a conversation, nor did he know how to get out of the royal presence. At last, making a desperate effort, he remarked that his Majesty must be left nearly, if not quite, childless, by the death of the eighty-nine. "Yes," replied the Pasha, "I am now, nearly childless—I have but one hundred and seventy three children left; but Allah be praised!"

"Doctor," said a young Miss, of the high heeled modest school. "Ma sent me to tell you that sister Maria Euphemia Dudley Louisa Minerva Rhody Jane has got a sore above the wrist of her left foot, between the wrist and shoulder."

A Puzzle for a Foreigner
Wife, make me some dumplings of dough.
They're better than meat for my aching;
Pray let them be boiled till hot through;
But not till they're heavy or tough.

Now, I must be off to the plough,
And the boys, when they've had enough,
Must keep the flies off with a bough,
While the old mare licks at the trough.

"Oh that we could but fix upon eternal and unchangeable Being the affections which here we pour forth, a wasted treasure upon the dust! But they are of the earth, earthly; they cling with vain devotedness to mortal idols: how often to be thrown back upon our hearts and to press them down with a weight of voiceless thoughts, and of feelings which find no answer in the world!"

A FATAL LACKEY.—The following paragraph is published in a French paper, the Journal des Voyages.—A few days since a young girl, residing near Chartres (Vosges), on returning from Nancy, where she had been to receive $20,000, which had been bequeathed to her by a relative, was overtaken on the road by a young man and girl, who fell into conversation with her. She had placed in a hand basket, and as the young man observed she frequently transferred it, on account of its weight, from one hand to the other, he offered to carry it for her, which was accepted. The young man at the same time thrust some things of his own into it and among the rest, his papers. On reaching Crevechamp, they all entered a public house to take some refreshment, and the young woman, receiving the basket from her male companion, placed it on the table by her side.

The mistress of the house in serving them, struck against the basket, which gave out a metallic sound. She asked what the basket contained, was informed 800 francs belonging to the young woman. The plan of the mistress of the house was without doubt, formed instantaneously, for, making a sign to the girl to follow her out, she said to her when in the passage, "You are not aware with whom you have been walking; that young man is a very bad character. Do not think of departing with him." "What am I to do, then," said the girl. "Take your basket and go down into the cellar, where you will find my husband. You can remain there until the others are gone." The young woman acted as the woman recommended, and when the other travelers were about to depart, they inquired for their companion. "She has gone one before you," says the woman, "you will overtake her."

The young man urged the girl who was with him to make all the haste she could, as he wanted to recover his papers. After walking until late in the evening, they overtook no one, but being met by two gendarmes, were called on by them to give an account of themselves. They mentioned what had happened, but the whole story appeared to the gendarmes, a very unlikely one. However, the gendarmes agreed to accompany the young man back to the public house. When they arrived there the door was closed, and no answer was given to them when they knocked. The gendarmes at last forced their way in, and found nothing of a suspicious character in the rooms above; but in the cellar was discovered the body of the young woman cut up into pieces. The husband and the wife who had perpetrated the murder, were at once arrested.

A GREATER THAN ERICSSON.—The General correspondent of the Newark Daily Advertiser says: "A complete revolution in the means of steam navigation and locomotion is anticipated here from a recent invention by Dr. Carosi, of this city. He has, it is said, succeeded in constructing an apparatus for the decomposition of water by electro-magnetism, which will introduce the gas thus generated into the engine, in a way to save all the expense of fuel. His invention has been approved by savans and practical engineers, and a company has subscribed the means of giving it a full experiment. Means have also been adopted to secure patents in all other countries."

AN AFFAIR OF IMPORTANCE.—Harriet—Oh! I am so glad you are come, Blanche! I have been so perplexed. I could hardly sleep all night. Blanche—Well, what is it, dear? Harriet—Why, I don't know whether to have my new merino frock violet or dark blue?—Punch.

A clown went to the clergyman of his parish, and told him, in great consternation, that he had seen a ghost.

"Where did you see it?"

"Why," said Diggory, "as I was going to please your reverence, by the church, right up against the wall I seen a ghost."

"For all the world like a great ass!"

"Go home and hold your tongue!" said the clergyman. "You are a timid creature, and have been frightened at your own shadow."

From the Capt Bay we gather the following scrap on office seekers:

"The office-holders are all in a sweat," said an office-hunter, with exultation; "True," said old Roger, "I never yet saw such a General Pierce-piration!"

FRIED MEAT.—Mash, to be fried should be boiled an hour longer, and have half a pint of wheat flour stirred into it about half an hour before it is done. Take it out of the pot, and put it in an earthen dish and let it stand till perfectly cold, then cut it in slices half an inch thick, and fry them brown.

When Adam got tired naming his numerous descendants, he said, "Let all the rest be called Smith."

What Can be got for Five Dollars!!
The undersigned have entered into an arrangement by which they agree to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, (monthly,) the Home Journal, (weekly,) and the Musical World and Times, (weekly,) to new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications: all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

Grand Literary and Artistic Combination.

Arrangements have been made to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, the Home Journal, and the New York Musical World and Times, to new subscribers, for five dollars a year! This is cheap literature, with a vengeance. The Knickerbocker is $3 per annum; the Home Journal, $2; and the Musical World and Times, $3 making $8 a year at the usual rates. That three such works can be obtained for five dollars a year, is a fact truly worthy of the Calibricage, which is just now being ushered in. Of the Knickerbocker Magazine, edited by Lewis Gaylord Clark, it is unnecessary to speak. For twenty years it has been the most genial, humorous, and spicy "monthly" in the world; and the present volume will be better than any which preceded it. The Home Journal, edited by Geo. P. Morris and N. P. Willis, is well known as the best family newspaper in America; and the Musical World and Times, edited by Richard Storrs Willis, with Lowell Mason, Geo. H. Curtis, Thomas Hastings, Wm. P. Brewster, Geo. F. Root, and other musical writers contributing; and which gives among other things, over $25 worth of music and a full course of instruction in harmony annually, is the very best musical Journal ever published. These three publications will post a family up in regard to nearly everything worth knowing.—Art, Science, Literature, Music, Painting, Sculpture, Inventions, Discoveries; Wit, Humor, Fancy, Sentiment; the Newest Fashion and other attractions for Ladies, Choice New Music for the Sabbath, the Church and the Fireside; Reviews and Criticisms of Musical Works, Performers and Performances; in short, the very pick and cream of Novelty, Incident, History, Biography, Art, Literature and Science; including whatever can be given in periodicals to promote clearly Amusement and Solid Instruction in the family, and help to make it Better, Wiser, and Happier, may be now obtained for five dollars. Address DYER & WILLIS, 257 Broadway.

Editors publishing the above three times and sending the papers containing it to Dyer & Willis, will receive the three works named, for one year.

COLUMBIAN AND GREAT WEST.

PROGRAMME FOR 1851.

The continuation of our excellent series of Western Romances and Tales.

Mr. Bennett's Forrest Rose will be followed by a domestic story of Western life, founded on facts, entitled—

ELLA WINSTON;

Or, the Adventures of an Orphan Girl.

By WALTER WHITMORE, Esq.,

Author of "Annie," the "Maid of the Inn," "Love and Retribution," and other popular tales.

Mr. Whitmore is an accomplished scholar, as well as a polished and energetic writer, and his "Ella Winston" is pronounced, by good judges, to be equal if not superior to the best Western Novel ever written.

Ella Winston will be succeeded by GERARD LINCOLN; by Miss A. S. St. Clair, author of "Senora Inez," &c.

It is enough for us to say that this production is worthy of Miss St. Clair's reputation. To be finished in four numbers.

We take pleasure in informing our readers that, at a very large expense, we have succeeded in effecting an engagement with MRS. E. D. N. SOUTHWORTH.

We are further much gratified in being able to announce that we are promised another historical novel by the incidents to be connected with the Revolutionary war. This will be ready the ensuing spring.

Each of the tales we have mentioned will be completed in a few weeks, and will not only be free from all that could offend a pure and cultivated taste, but will convey instructive and useful lessons.

L. A. HINE, ESQ.,

will immediately resume his valuable articles upon

THE RESOURCES OF THE WEST.

And we are assured by MR. GALLAGHER, that the pretensions of several prominent WRITERS OF THE WEST will soon be considered.

ELEVENTH YEAR
LOUISVILLE

WEEKLY COURIER.

Acknowledged by general consent to be the Largest, Best and Cheapest Newspaper in the West.

In issuing the Eleventh Prospectus of the LOUISVILLE WEEKLY COURIER, we have great pleasure in announcing that Mr. Wm. D. Gallagher, Esq., has purchased an interest in the establishment, and he will hereafter be associated with us in its management. Mr. Gallagher is widely known as an able political and literary writer and a gentleman of cultivated taste, and being thoroughly Western in his education, habits and associations, and conversant with our Railroad and Manufacturing interests, we flatter ourselves that he will add largely to the value and interest of the Courier, and render it still more acceptable to its thousands of readers in every section of the great Mississippi Valley.

The Louisville Weekly Courier, Edited and Published by

W. D. GALLAGHER & W. N. HALDEMAN,

Is one of the largest, handsomest and best papers in the Union, and for the quantity and quality of matter it contains and the great care taken in its preparation, it is beyond all question

The Cheapest Paper in the West!

As a NEWSPAPER, its character is well established. Our readers of many years will bear witness that for enterprise, energy and reliability, it has borne the palm from all its contemporaries in Kentucky. It is almost invariably ahead in the publication of important news. It procures news of interest from all quarters, both by telegraph and private express, up to the very moment of publication, and entirely regardless of expense.

As a Commercial Paper, the Courier stands without a rival in Louisville. The gentleman who has had charge of the Commercial Department for the last six years, and whose entire time is devoted to it, has no superior, and his reports may always be regarded as accurate and reliable.

As a Literary Paper, we intend that it shall hereafter occupy much higher ground than heretofore. The Tales and Novelleries we publish will alone be worth ten times the price of the paper.

The Miscellaneous and Agricultural Departments will meet with all necessary attention. They will be both full and useful.

I have a good supply of STATIONERY, on hand and for sale, such as: FOLSCAP AND LETTER PAPER.

NOTE PAPER, PLAIN AND FANCY ENVELOPES, STEEL PENS, &c., &c.

W. W. JACK.

In the Western Courier will be found only Whigs; but while advocating Whig measures and Whig principles, we do not intend to do so to the exclusion of our usual variety. Our readers may rest assured that they will not be surprised with politics through our columns.

Early in January we will commence the publication of the Original Stories: The Martyr of the Heart, by Miss MATTIE GAVEN; The Little Cripple and his Foster Mother, by ALICE STANLEY.

A lady of Kentucky, whose literary productions have been greatly admired.

By adopting the Cash System, and strictly adhering to it, we are enabled to still further reduce the price of our paper, and will hereafter furnish it, large as it is, at the following

THE BRITISH PERIODICALS.

AND THE FARMER'S GUIDE, LEONARD SCOTT & CO., No. 54 Gold street, New York.

CONTINUE to publish the four leading British Quarterly Reviews and Blackwood's Magazine; in addition to which, they have recently commenced the publication of a valuable Agricultural work, called the

"FARMER'S GUIDE TO SCIENTIFIC AND PRACTICAL AGRICULTURE."

By HENRY STEPHENS, F. R. S., of Edinburgh, author of the "Book of the Farm," &c., &c.; assisted by JOHN P. NOIXON, M. A., New Haven, Professor of Scientific Agriculture in Yale College, &c., &c.

This highly valuable work will comprise two large royal octavo volumes, containing over 1400 pages, with 18 or 20 splendid steel engravings, and more than 600 engravings on wood, in the highest style of the art, illustrating almost every implement of husbandry now in use by the best farmers, the best methods of plowing, planting, haying, harvesting, &c., &c., the various domestic animals in their highest perfection; in short the pictorial feature of the book is unique, and will render it of incalculable value to the student of Agriculture.

This work is being published in Semi-monthly Numbers, of 64 pages each, exclusive of the Steel engravings, and is sold at 25 cents each, or $5 for the entire work in numbers, of which there will be at least twenty-two.

The British Periodicals Re-published are as follows, viz:

The London Quarterly Review (Conservative),
The Review (Whig),
The North British Review (Free Church),
The Westminster Review (Liberal), and Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine (Tory).

Although these works are distinguished by the political shades above indicated, yet but a small portion of their contents is devoted to political subjects. It is their literary character which gives them their chief value, and in that they stand confessedly far above all other journals of their class. Blackwood, still under the masterly guidance of Christopher North, maintains its ancient celebrity, and is, at this time, unusually attractive, from the serial works of Bulwer and other literary notables, written for that magazine, and first appearing in its columns both in Great Britain and in the United States. Such works as "The Caxtons" and "My New Novel," (both by Bulwer), "My Peninsular Medal," "The Green Hand," and other serials, of which numerous rival editions are issued by the leading publishers in this country, have to be reprinted by those publishers from the pages of Blackwood, AFTER IT HAS BEEN ISSUED BY MESSRS. SCOTT & CO., so that subscribers to the reprint of that Magazine may always rely on having the EARLIEST reading of these fascinating tales.
